

COPYRIGHT AND RELATED RIGHTS IN THE INFORMATION SOCIETY: THE LAW OF 1 AUGUST 2006

September 2006

The law on copyright and related rights in the information society, adopted on 30 June 2006 by Parliament, was finally promulgated on 1 August 2006 (after consultation of the Conseil Constitutionnel which had been referred to in respect of certain of its provisions).

This law heralded a major overhaul in the law on copyright and related rights in France. Its main objective was to transpose the European Directive of 22 May 2001 on copyright and related rights in the information society. However, it also served as the opportunity to make certain changes to the Intellectual Property Code.

In a nutshell, the law:

- introduced new exceptions (limited) to copyright and related rights, and modified the rules on compensation for private copying,
- transposed the rules on “technological protection and information measures”,
- introduced and strengthened certain procedural and criminal provisions, specifically concerning Internet infringement,
- specified for the first time the regime for works created by “public agents” [i.e. persons employed by the French Public Service],
- introduced a tax credit mechanism applicable to the cost of producing phonographic works,
- adapted the regime on re-sale rights,
- modified the legal deposit regime, and
- modified certain provisions on rights collecting societies.

We will address the main provisions of that law in detail in our next newsletter.
